Article Submission Guidelines

Knowledge Management - Doctrine UK

Goals

- Giving space or platform for the member of Doctrine UK to write short articles by following the journalistic guidelines.
- Redirecting something specific (scientifically) to more generalised writing, i.e. popular science article.

Submission requirements
- Short text (500-800 words).   - Written by single author or co-authored.   - Bahasa Indonesia or English.

Have ideas and need any assistance about developing the article?

We are also welcoming ideas submission!

- You can send us your idea about the article in the form of pointers (PPT or Word).
- After reviewing your idea, we can advise you on what to improve.
- Or if your idea is good already, you can proceed with the writing! :D

Journalism value of academic expertise

- New research
  - Introducing your research.
  - Explaining new findings.
  - Providing new insights.

- News analysis, comment or opinion
  - Comment or analysis of topical issues.
  - Event–led response.

- Timeless stories or questions.
  - Interesting stories.
  - Answer an interesting question.

- Explanation
  - Show how something is done.
  - Straightforward explanation of special terminology, process or event.

- Personal stories
  - Insight from own experience.
  - Voices drawn from your research.

Submission types

Article

- Pop-science based on your research or expertise.
- It could also be about theory explanation.

Methodological Support

- Methodology- and tools-based writings to support data processing or analysis.

PhD Life Hacks

- A more informal submission, based on personal experience during your study, mainly about non-academic life.
- To promote the value of work and life balance.

Top tips!

- Think about your audience. They are educated and curious but probably not interested in diving through dense details.
- Tell the readers something they don't know and why it matters. Why should they care?

- You don't have to dumb down, but ideas need to be expressed clearly for non-specialist readers.
- Be consistent with the language. Avoid using English words in Bahasa Indonesia articles and vice versa (except if there's no accurate equivalent word).
